Street, and has received, during the year, one hundred and twentyone new scholars; of which eightyfour have left and seven have died. The attendance in winter, is about forty; in summer, from sixty to seventy. The number now on the list is 75. The other was opened in Garden Street, in October, with thirteen scholars. There are sixty now on the list, and the number is daily increasing. Both these schools appear to be in a flourishing condition, and exerting a very salutary moral influence. There was another school belonging to the society in Bedford Street, but for various reasons it has been discontinued. This report also presents many interesting anecdotes illustrating the importance and efficacy of infant school instruction; besides some valuable remarks on the subject in general. We have only room for the following extract. Infant schools take the children of the poor, when only eighteen months old, and place them under the care of a pious and intelligent teacher, who from day to day, endeavors to instill into their tender minds the great truths and duties of religion--constantly endeavoring to counteract the bad influence of home, by drawing them to the love and practice of every virtue, blending amusement and instruction in the useful branches of knowledge. This process goes on till they are four or five years old. During this period a foundation is laid for moral and religious character; and here the Sabbath school comes in, to carry on the work-strengthening...
