Besides which--had not these Galilean men a mighty work to do? a work of saving efficacy, requiring persevering faith, self-denying effort, patient waiting, and the time but short to do it in. Why did they, then, stand gazing, and stand idle? (see St. Matt. xx. 3, 6.) Did they stand, too, somewhat sorrowful? Perhaps the very shadow of this, their first real sorrow, was seen to flit over their countenance; and even this would surprise the Angels. For to them the wonder would have been, if Jesus had stayed any longer upon earth. His work was done: why should He tarry? The world is sin-stained; is it a fit place for Him, in whom is no sin? Oh, no. And therefore the Light of the World was withdrawing the visible form of His presence to the world above, which the...
